

THE UNIVERSITY OF HONG KONG
FACULTY OF EDUCATION

Museums as Classrooms – Experiential Learning at Hong Kong, Greater Bay Area and Singapore Museums (BBED6808)

Information Sheet

This course offers experiential learning activities at museums in Hong Kong (HK), the Greater Bay Area (GBA) and Singapore. HK schools have increasingly recognized the significance of museums as essential community resources for fostering students' life-long learning. HK museums are rich community resources for edutainment. They play a crucial role in acquiring, conserving, researching and exhibiting precious collections related to our cultural, historical and scientific advancements, and natural heritage. Similarly, museums in the GBA and Singapore offer unique opportunities for students to delve into all these aspects. By engaging in museum activities, students would gain a deeper understanding of the diverse and interconnected nature of our global society.

A wide range of museum learning activities including guided tours, hands-on workshops, interactive exhibits, reflection practices and self-directed museum learning opportunities would be provided. Students are required to create a museum learning package and multimedia presentations, and compile reflective journals as well as ePortfolio to showcase their learning experiences.

Target: All undergraduates
